

WEEK THREE

JOHN 6:1-13

Feeding 5,000

SAY
THIS

Use what you have to serve others.

WEEK THREE

JOHN 6:1-13

Feeding 5,000

SAY THIS

Use what you have to serve others.

DO THIS

BED TIME

Read John 13. Jesus, God's own Son, set aside what He deserved to serve His friends. We can serve our friends and families and the people we meet every day. Together, brainstorm some creative ways that you could serve others at home, school, and in your community. Then choose one to do this week. Ask God to give each of you a heart and opportunity to serve others.

REMEMBER THIS

"Jesus sat down and called for the 12 disciples to come to him. Then he said, "Anyone who wants to be first must be the very last. They must be the servant of everyone."
Mark 9:35, NIV

LIFE
APP

SERVICE—Lending a hand to help someone else

DO THIS

BED TIME

Read John 13. Jesus, God's own Son, set aside what He deserved to serve His friends. We can serve our friends and families and the people we meet every day. Together, brainstorm some creative ways that you could serve others at home, school, and in your community. Then choose one to do this week. Ask God to give each of you a heart and opportunity to serve others.

REMEMBER THIS

"Jesus sat down and called for the 12 disciples to come to him. Then he said, "Anyone who wants to be first must be the very last. They must be the servant of everyone."
Mark 9:35, NIV

LIFE
APP

SERVICE—Lending a hand to help someone else

HUDDLE IN CLOSE

By Brooklyn Lindsey

Life brings tragedy and heartache. And as a parent, you will likely have to watch your child experience grief—whether it be over the loss of a special toy, a friendship or boyfriend, or even the life of someone close to them. And when it happens, your heart breaks too. Because you want to fix it, resolve it, but you know you can't. How do you walk through it with them? What words do you say and how do you comfort your grieving child?

Huddling in close is one of the greatest kindnesses we can show our kids during these times.

We don't have to say anything. They likely don't want an explanation. We realize without asking that everything is not fine in their world. The words that they need are your proximity and your heart's empathy. Huddling in close is kindness for the weeping.

In those moments it's normal to be unsure about what to say or what to do. There is no playbook for comforting our kids or anyone in crisis—except the guidance of love, the whisper of empathy, the holy nudge inside telling us to remain quiet or to reach out. There is no script for explaining to your child the sadness at hand. The best thing we can do is 1) admit that we don't have an answer and 2) resist the temptation to try to make things better with our words.

Words will come later. Love comes in kindness first.

Be kind to the one who is hurting in your life. It could be your spouse, your child, or a friend.

Be kind by huddling in close without expectation and waiting for them to show you how to love them.

Huddle in knowing that love heals us.

Huddle in remembering that love binds us together.

Huddle in knowing that forgiveness will come.

Huddle in knowing that the huddling in is the kind of community that every kid and family needs.

Romans 12:15 "Celebrate with those who celebrate and weep with those who weep."

.....
For more blog posts
and parenting resources, visit:
ParentCue.org

HUDDLE IN CLOSE

By Brooklyn Lindsey

Life brings tragedy and heartache. And as a parent, you will likely have to watch your child experience grief—whether it be over the loss of a special toy, a friendship or boyfriend, or even the life of someone close to them. And when it happens, your heart breaks too. Because you want to fix it, resolve it, but you know you can't. How do you walk through it with them? What words do you say and how do you comfort your grieving child?

Huddling in close is one of the greatest kindnesses we can show our kids during these times.

We don't have to say anything. They likely don't want an explanation. We realize without asking that everything is not fine in their world. The words that they need are your proximity and your heart's empathy. Huddling in close is kindness for the weeping.

In those moments it's normal to be unsure about what to say or what to do. There is no playbook for comforting our kids or anyone in crisis—except the guidance of love, the whisper of empathy, the holy nudge inside telling us to remain quiet or to reach out. There is no script for explaining to your child the sadness at hand. The best thing we can do is 1) admit that we don't have an answer and 2) resist the temptation to try to make things better with our words.

Words will come later. Love comes in kindness first.

Be kind to the one who is hurting in your life. It could be your spouse, your child, or a friend.

Be kind by huddling in close without expectation and waiting for them to show you how to love them.

Huddle in knowing that love heals us.

Huddle in remembering that love binds us together.

Huddle in knowing that forgiveness will come.

Huddle in knowing that the huddling in is the kind of community that every kid and family needs.

Romans 12:15 "Celebrate with those who celebrate and weep with those who weep."

.....
For more blog posts
and parenting resources, visit:
ParentCue.org